

The totem poles around Juneau are reminders of Southeast's first residents. Tlingit and Haida Indians traditionally carved the poles to commemorate special people and events.